Wellness ± Choices for Living (Two hours)

Associate Professor Chair

Choices I. WELL 1101: Concept

provide students with a broad intellectual framework in which they may consider or identify their major field(s) of study.

Perspectives courses must be introductory in nature and either fundamental to, or otherwise characteristic of, their disciplines. Moreover, they must meet the same pedagogical standards typically required of courses in their respective departments, divisions and schools. They must be critical in approach and introduce students to primary sources. Where appropriate, they must be writing-intensive. Finally, they must be interactive, a requirement that may be fulfilled in a variety of ways (see General Rules Items 12 to 15), ideally by the end of the second year.

Classes marked with an asterisk (*) also fulfill the Human Diversity requirement. The list of Perspectives courses offered per term can be accessed at www.smu.edu/
