

POLICY BRIEF

Health Care and Education Access of Transnational Children in Mexico

STATEMENT OF ISSUE

their parents to migrate in the first place.

KEY FINDINGS

Transnational children in Mexico are 28% less likely than their Mexican counterparts to be affiliated with any health care

Among children who are affiliated, U.S.-born children are also less likely to be affiliated with, and receive health care from, a Lack of proper documentation could explain gaps in health care access. In 2015, this was still a significant barrier among

There are no significant gaps in the outcomes of primary-school children by place of birth, while there are positive gaps for their Mexican identification documents and with assistance to

POLICY RECOMMENDATIONS

SOURCES AND FULL PAPER

