

Overview

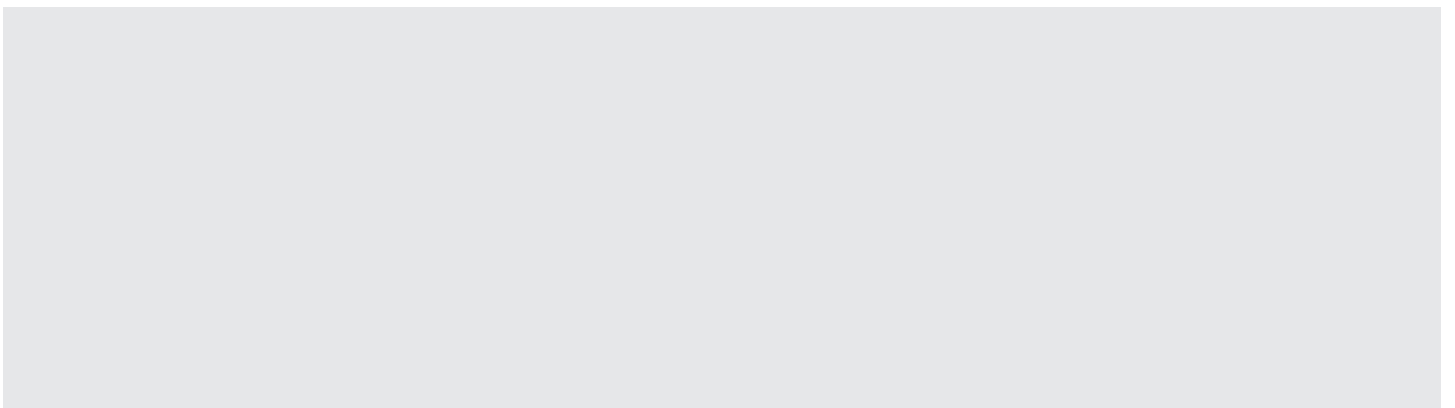

stop illegal border crossings, reduce drug flows across the border, and detain more illegal border crossers.

greater support for these priorities

Texans' views on a border wall were mixed.

51 percent of Texan respondents expressed support for the border wall,

Nationally, the highest support for the wall came from GOP respondents:

"hard working," and "self-reliant" "law abiding," "actively integrating into American society and learning English,"

"actively integrating into American society and learning English" immigrants be able to hold a basic English as a Second Language (ESL) test by 1994

What Does This Say About Texas's Influence in the National Immigration Debate?

While Texans are proud of their heritage, their preferences for a future immigration system were not that different from the rest of America. However, they held more nuanced views about effective border security, as well as English-speaking criteria. They supported enforcement of immigration laws and state actions, but they still wanted to see the federal government take the lead on reform efforts.

Methodology

1.

2.

3.

4.