Dedman School of Law Presents:

The year 1911 was a pivotal moment in history that marked China's transformation from a traditional empire to a modern nation state, thereby ending the two thousand yearlong era of Chinese Imperialism. The events of the year unleashed a host of economic, political, and social changes in China and in other areas of the world which continue to reverberate today. In many important ways, the 1911 Revolution was the culmination of a protracted struggle for national independence, nation and state building, constitutionalism, republicanism, and economic development. All of these issues continue to be central to current political discussions in Republic of China (ROC, Taiwan), People's Republic of China, and indeed in much of the rest of the world.

Panelists:

Anne Chao, Rice University

Joseph Esherick, University of San Diego

Ling Shiao, Southern Methodist University

Harold Tanner, North Texas University

Peter Worthing, Texas Christian University
