

Plan Your Own Path

OVERVIEW

Energy, environment and natural resources law deals generally with the regulation and management of resources critical to sustainability and responsible development. The field includes legal responses to the control of pollution from human activities including air, water and solid and hazardous waste. It also includes legal systems for the preservation and management of natural resources. Practice in the field necessarily requires familiarity with a wide range of legal areas including business, real estate, tort and administrative law.

TRADITIONAL TECHNICAL COMPETENCIES

Enroll in foundational courses during your first and second year:

- Property I and II
- Legislation and Regulation
-

OWNERSHIP OF PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT COMPETENCIES