This afternoon, the Moody School held an Ice Cream Social for graduate students on the Moody Hall patio to welcome graduate students and postdocs back to campus with a refreshing treat. This event is part of a line-up of social activities organized by the Moody School throughout the year to foster a community of graduate students and postdocs across programs.

Yesterday and today, the Moody School held breakfast and lunch meetings with department chairs and directors of graduate studies for programs at Dedman College of Humanities and Sciences, Lyle School of Engineering, Meadows School of the Arts, and Simmons School of Education and Human Development. These meetings serve to share information about the services and support offered by the Moody School and to thank faculty leaders with whom the Moody School works closely.

The Moody School will be holding more activities, events, and workshops for graduate students and postdoctoral scholars throughout the year. Information about upcoming events can be found on the
